CALL TO WORSHIP “Psalm 1”

L: Blessed are those who do not walk in the counsel of the wicked;

P: ... or stand in the way of sinners, or sit in the seat of scoffers,

L: ... but their delight is in the law of the Lord,

P: ... and on God’s law they meditate day and night.

L: They are like trees planted by streams of water that yield their fruit in season, and their leaves do not wither.

P: In all that they do, they prosper.

L: The wicked are not so, but are like chaff which the wind drives away.

P: Therefore the wicked will not stand in the judgment; nor sinners in the congregation of the righteous;

L: ... for the Lord knows the way of the righteous,

P: ... but the way of the wicked will perish.

UNISON PRAYER “Concerning the Scriptures”

Blessed Lord, you have caused all holy Scriptures to be written for our learning. Grant us so to hear them, read, mark, learn, and inwardly digest them, that we may embrace and ever hold fast the blessed hope of everlasting life, which you have given us in our Savior Jesus Christ, who lives and reigns with you and the Holy Spirit, One God, forever and ever. Amen

VISITATION TEAM

“Then the King will say to those at his right hand, ‘Come, O blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world; for I was hungry and you gave me food, I was thirsty and you gave me drink, I was a stranger and you welcomed me, I was naked and you clothed me, I was sick and you visited me, I was in prison and you came to me.’ ... And the King will answer them, ‘Truly, I say to you, as you did it to one of the least of these my brethren, you did it to me.’”
Matthew 25:34-36, 40

Pastor Bruce is calling upon our congregation to pray for God’s guidance in becoming a member of our Visitation Team. So many times when our active members and friends become home-bound or for other reasons they cannot attend regular services, they are simply forgotten by the church they love so dearly. Sometimes a person visits our church and they are forgotten when they leave the building. Sometimes people just need a visit from the pastor or a visitation team. Please consider becoming a member of a team who will visit them, take Communion to them, share the latest happenings of our church, and generally make them feel connected to our congregation.

Pastor Bruce will meet with those interested in being part of this much needed ministry, explain his plan, give advice on visiting, and then commission the team during our worship services. If you have some time to spare and would like to share that time with others, please contact Pastor Bruce (724-747-6098 (call or text) or preacherptl@gmail.com) or the church office (724-863-6858 or irwinfirstumc@comcast.net)

Also, if you know of someone who would benefit from a visit by Pastor Bruce and/or our Visitation Team please contact Pastor Bruce or the church office.

OUR NEW BISHOP - CYNTHIA MOORE-KOIKOI was appointed bishop on Friday, July 15, 2016. Bishop Cynthia Moore-Koikoi “can’t wait to see how God is going to work in and through and among us,” she told Western Pennsylvania delegates and leaders shortly after being assigned to serve in the Pittsburgh Area. She will begin her new assignment on September 1, the same day Bishop Thomas J. Bickerton will become bishop of the New York Area.

The second daughter of a United Methodist pastor who served 40 years in ministry in the Baltimore-Washington Conference, Bishop Moore-Koikoi said that as a bishop she is committed to work toward a vision of a diverse church that embraces justice and the life-saving love of Christ. She acknowledges that it won’t be easy, but said, “I remind myself that God has got this. God is in control. My role and the church’s role is to experience the reign of God here on earth and point that out to people.”

Acknowledging deep divisions in the denomination around human sexuality issues, she said that after being notified of her assignment, “God said to me: “Cynthia, you’ve been talking about this. We have an opportunity to show the world what unity really looks like. You asked for this.” “I know there are folks in the room who are diametrically opposed to what I believe about this issue,” she added. “But we have an opportunity to show the world what it might look like for brothers and sisters to dwell together in unity. And it is going to be that witness that claims souls for Jesus the Christ! “We won’t have to say a word about who God is,” she pointed out. “Seeing us working together...is going to say something about who God is. And there are going to be people who will say, ‘If they can do it, they must have something inside of them that is greater than what is outside in that world. And I want to find out about that!’ “This, I believe, just might be our call,” the Bishop added. “This just might be our call!”

On Wednesday night, July 13, she became just the second African-American woman to be elected a Bishop in the Northeastern Jurisdiction (NEJ), receiving 64 percent of the vote on the 11th ballot. Another African-American woman, LaTrelle Miller Easterling of the New England Conference, was elected the following morning after several other candidates withdrew from the process.

Moore-Koikoi is familiar with church life and ministry in rural, urban and suburban settings. Growing up in a preacher's family, she said, "you experience about every kind of church you can serve. When she was in elementary school, her father served in a rural church "on the top of a very, very long hill, and in the back yard was a cemetery. Beside the church property was a farm with cows that would frequently get out and we would have to call up the farmer and ask them to come and round up their herd. " Later, her father served a church in suburban Silver Spring, MD, where she went to junior high and high school.

Bishop Moore-Koikoi earned a Bachelor of Arts degree in psychology from Loyola College in Maryland in 1988, and a Masters of Arts and advanced certification in school psychology from the University of Maryland in 1992. She worked as a school psychologist for Anne Arundel County Public Schools for 17 years before answering her call to the ordained ministry. Attending Wesley Seminary, she was appointed as a student pastor to "a small congregation with a proud EUB heritage in a section of East Baltimore that was experiencing change." The first wave was African-American, then Hispanic, she said, and the congregation had to learn how to navigate that change. Later she was appointed associate pastor at Calvary UMC, an affluent congregation in Annapolis. Ordained an elder in 2010, she served on the Conference staff working with churches on discipleship. She later served as district superintendent for the Greater Washington Area, and most recently as superintendent of the Baltimore Metropolitan District. In that role, she played a pivotal spiritual role in the city following the unrest in 2015 after the death of Freddie Gray in police custody. She helped to organize United Methodist Churches to open and minister to children and families whose schools were closed, and to meet people's needs. She became the face of the United Methodist Church and church volunteers in red T-shirts were visible praying for and ministering to the neighborhoods. Read her commentary Is Baltimore rising a year after Freddie Gray's death?

Bishop Moore Koikoi answered her call to ministry while a member of Sharp Street Memorial UMC in Baltimore, her great-grandfather's church and the church which sent her father into ministry. Her husband of three years, the Rev. Raphael Koikoi, currently serves as pastor there. "We are in an area where people struggle daily...to feed their children," Pastor Koikoi told the Western Pennsylvania group. "We are in one of the five zipcodes where we fund the prison system. In other words, the majority of people who are in prison in Maryland come from one of those five zipcodes. My heart is with youth ministry; my heart is with the marginalized, the disenfranchised."

The new Bishop too said she loves working with youth and doing mission work. "I love painting stuff, building stuff. I love doing that with youth because they have that work play balance. They know how to do the fellowship stuff while they do the building stuff. Sometimes the adults get too focused on finishing that project that we forget that its important to just stop and be with each other. So youth help us get that right," she said. "I also feel increasingly called to do the kind of mission work where we are dismantling systems; where we are speaking truth to power; where we are showing the world the true power of God. God's power includes making sure that everyone is fed, but God's power also includes speaking truth to powerful people. She told the Western Pennsylvania delegates and leaders: "What you see is what you get. Know that you can trust me—what you see is what you get. And that's what I require of you also -- that you be honest and open.

As she told her husband when they were contemplating marriage, she said: "If you have a problem, if there is some issue, you need to tell me about it rather than having me find out about it. And I can work through anything! I can work through anything as long as you tell me about it and we can work together. That's who I am." Standing at the podium of the NEJ Conference after her election, she said the being elected Bishop is a sacred trust. "I'm going to need your prayers so that I can fulfill that trust," she said. "...God spoke through you tonight, and that's going to continue." The newly elected Bishop said she once sang in a group called Tapestry. "Sometimes, God took all of the single chords and wove them together into something spectacular," she said. "We need to show the world that God is more than just a good and beautiful God; God is a spectacular God." In overseeing the work of the church, working prophetically, evangelically and apostolically with all, she noted, bishops must leave space for the transforming movement of the Holy Spirit, especially at this time, when the denomination is divided and many people may be wondering about what the future might hold. "That's spiritual work — remembering who God is and who God has called us to be," she said. "We got God, so we got this."

Extreme Heat and Your Health

<https://www.cdc.gov/extremeheat/>

Heat-related deaths and illness are preventable, yet annually many people succumb to extreme heat. Follow these rules from the Center for Disease Control to help stay safe in the heat:

- Keep your body temperature cool to avoid heat-related illness.

- Do not rely on a fan as your primary cooling device.
- Avoid direct sunlight.

- Check on those most at-risk twice a day.

Because your body loses fluids through sweat, you can become dehydrated during times of extreme heat.

Drink more water than usual.

Don't wait until you're thirsty to drink more fluids.

Drink from two to four cups of water every hour while working or exercising outside.

Avoid alcohol or liquids containing high amounts of sugar.

Remind others to drink enough water.

Stay updated on local weather forecasts so you can plan activities safely when it's hot outside. Check local news for extreme heat alerts and safety tips.
